

---

43

We are...?

GLAP Collective:

John Hughes, Liz Murray,

Simon Rattigan and Mia Taylor

---

We Are...? Glap Collective

We are four

We met thirteen years ago

We are friends, collaborators and participators

We collaborated two years ago on an unpaid project

We did it around our other commitments

We enjoyed working together enough to do it again

We became a Collective

We have different preoccupations and concerns

We are not the same, but

We create a malleable space between us, in which

We can write about the world, editing out our individual voices as we go

We have a narrative

We meet as regularly as we can

We divide the work

We apply to things

We get accepted

We get rejected

We don't feel this is enough

We ask what is our direction?

We try to contain our interests

We talk about models of collectivism

We are often motivated

We are sometimes enervated

We are always rushed

We spend time we don't have

We ask why are we doing this?

We ask are we relevant and to whom?

We have different ideas about this

We want different things

We have a name but not an identity

We wonder if this is a problem, for us or for them

We still want to work together (for now)

We propose to come to as many of the ~~Being Together Is Not~~ ~~Enough~~ events as we can

We propose to show up